Performance = f(Capability, Accountability)

After extensive research over the years and our interactions with thousands of leaders and organizations, we found that performance is based on two key components: capability and accountability.

Capability answers the question 'Can your team do it?', while accountability addresses the question 'Will your team own it?.'

In our experience of working with over 300 organizations globally, we identified accountability as the key differentiating factor between a high performing organization and a low performing one. While both capability and accountability are challenges worth addressing, our findings revealed that deeper dive is required within organizations towards accountability.
